B'd of Health, 1886-89; then served successively as ass't to Prof. Orin Pomeroy, to Prof. Emmett Holt of the N. Y. Polyclinic, Prof. John H. Ripley, Prof. George M. Lefferts of the Vanderbilt Clinic, Prof. Joseph Howe of N. Y. Univ., Prof. John Dorning of the Post-Graduate Hosp., Dr. W. P. Swift and Dr. R. P. Lincoln, distinguished throat specialist. Attending physician Minerva Home, 1885-88, Wayside Nursery, 1886-88, St. Joseph's Hosp., 1887-97, now consulting physician; also formerly attending and now consulting physician at St. Francis Hosp.; in 1906 appt'd visiting physician to N. Y. Hosp.; also mem. B'd Medical Directors Loomis Sanatorium. Has specialized on diseases of the nose, throat and ear, in which branches he is recognized as a world-wide authority; was throat surgeon at Vanderbilt Clinic, and Bellevue Hosp. Clinic, 1890-93; laryngologist Met. Coll. of Music since 1890; in private practice since 1886, now having probably the largest individual practice in N. Y. City, his patients averaging in number between 50 and 60 per day, he having treated 88,000 in the last 10 years. Has always taken deep interest in musical matters, having been tenor singer in the Trinity Coll. Glee Club, afterward first tenor at St. Thomas Ch., N. Y. City, and later sang in church choirs in Hartford, Conn., Brooklyn, and N. Y. City. This interest in music led him to an exhaustive study of the voice and the vocal organs, and he established a principle of hollow space resonances which has gained wide and authoritative recognition as the nearest to perfect theory of voice production; was the first practical advocate of a regular standard for tone of voice production, by which any voice can be definitely measured and classified; many of the most prominent singers of the country are among his patients. In August, 1908, Mr. Oscar Hammerstein, the well-known impresario, while looking about for a physician of well-known prominence and pronounced ability as a throat specialist, selected Dr. Miller (who is also a high class singer and musician), to pass upon the throats and vocal chords of his artists. The N. Y. American of Aug. 30, 1908, in a whole page article, quoted Mr. Hammerstein as saying: "My innovation means a revolution in voice-training methods that ultimately will benefit every young singer in this country. Through the direct advantage gained by applicants for positions in my chorus, other singers all over the country will benefit by personal knowledge of the anatomical and scientific aspect of their instrument and their art." Dr. Miller, in a paper written in 1906, for the Frankel Festschrift, and read before the Am. Laryngological, Rhinological and Otological Soc., at Kansas City, proposed a new theory of the origin of nodules from personal observation of 234 cases, and the first scientific investigations conducted at the New Surgical Laboratory, Coll. Phys. and Surg., were a series of original experiments, which confirmed his theory. He collaborated with Dr. James P. McEvoy and Prof. J. E. Weeks on A Compend on Nose, Throat and Ear Diseases, 1892, and numerous other papers on the Voice and the Vocal Organs. He has also made valuable investigations upon the care of consumption, especially in connection with hygienic and dietetic treatment, the thorough sterilization of milk and has published various papers pertaining to these subjects. He is a member of the American Med. Ass'n; Academy of Medicine, N. Y. County and State Med. Societies, Am. Laryngological, Rhinological and Otological Soc., Pen and Ink Soc. S. at Paris Electrical Exp'n, and at the Submarine Cable Convention; nominated for vice-president of the U.
